

Year: 2006
Location: Japan
Program:

Seishin Senior Community

To minimize the environmental impact on the hilly site close to Kobe, this senior community strived to preserve the natural woodland and minimize developed areas by adapting the architecture to the landscape and creating a natural living environment. Moreover, the objective was not only to produce housing for the elderly but to provide an attractive outdoor space for all age groups, residents and visitors alike.