

Year: 1986

Location: Japan

Program: Exhibition

Judith Turner Exhibition

The exhibition of the works of New York photographer Judith Turner consisted of a flexible panel system that could be linked into an appropriate shape for the space. Built-in lights freed the exhibition from any potentially poor lighting conditions. The panels were upholstered on both sides with a fabric that allowed for easy Velcro attachment of the photography.