

Year: 2009
Location: United Kingdom
Program: Installation

Paper Tower

A temporary tower made of paper tubes designed for the London Design Festival. The aims of this project were to challenge the perception of the everyday materials used, by creating dramatic temporary installations outside the Festival Hall. The tower is made from cardboard tubes and articulated by metal joints. The structure is 22m high and became the tallest paper tower in the world. This can be transformed to a permanent structure utilized as an observatory, a green house and a house.